South Korea: Mission movement has grown rapidly since the late 1970s. Today, there are 20,000 Korean missionaries sent by 60 denominations to fields of 177 countries. This growth has slowed since 2007 as only mature missionaries are sent out, partly due to the tragic incident in Afghanistan. 23 Korean missionaries were kidnapped by the Taliban terrorists. Two were killed before the others were released.

Mother-tongue Bible: A few years ago, a group of translation agencies committed to see a Bible translation work in progress for every language in the world needing it by year 2025. Today there are still 1,919 of those. But the combined effort of these agencies has lessened the time. Also helping greatly are advances in technology like satellite communication, computer programs, etc. 30 years ago, it took 20 years to complete a New Testament book on the average. Today, it is down to 8 years.

India: Historically, in this nation of very diverse language and people group, the church has stayed in their own state, own language and groups, not reaching out to others. Now, the Christians of higher concentration in the south are training and sending out internal missionaries outside of their cultural boundaries, especially to some of the Muslim areas of the north, where it is sensitive for Westerners to go.

Mission Internship: A senior elementary education student gets college credits as she intern with a Christian agency in orphanage in Guatemala. Not just helping kids for a few hours on arts and crafts, for weeks she gets to dress them in the morning, helps at meal times, and reading stories to them before bedtime. She is able to show Christ's love and build up relationship with orphans, the nannies and other workers. She has learned much in practical application of theories. Besides Guatemala, the agency has ministry in Uganda and Dominican Republic.

Ukraine: The protest movement of thousands against official anti-Europe policy has persisted for weeks. The church leaders that set up a prayer tent in the midst of it, sense a spiritual openness among the people and perhaps the beginning of a revival. Everyone is requesting a Bible or a New Testament. People are scare but determine to carry on. There is a story of a young man witnessing the riot police tearing down the barricades and advancing very close to the stage when the bells of St Michael's church started ringing as if crying for help. Some thing happened in the sky, and the police moved back. At that point he believed in God.

Guatemala: In decades of civil war (1962 to 1996), 200,000 were killed and many lost properties and plantations. In 2010, 60 families banded together finally were rewarded by the officials in the mountainous region a plantation. They had nothing, no electricity, no running water, and live in shacks built with stick and plastic roofs. An agency led by God, stumbled on them and started providing medical services and meeting other physical needs. A showing of the Jesus film and sharing of the gospel led many to Christ. The agency will continue to send short-term teams to work in building homes, water supply, a church, a school, etc.
